WHEN YOUR CHILD GETS CONSTIPATED

CLEANSE ITS LITTLE LITTLE STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS WITH "SYRUP OF FIGS."

Look at the tongue, Mother! Is the one's insides, the stomach, liver and 30 feet of bowels, are clogged up with putrifying waste matter and need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When your child is listless, drooping, doesn't sleep soundly or eat heartily, or is cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, or is full of cold, give a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs and in a very few hours all the foul, constipated, waste, undigested food and sour bile will gently move on and out of its little bowels without nausea, griping or weakness, and you surely will have a well, happy and smiling child again.

With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging your children, being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics it cannot be harmful, besides they dearly love its delicious taste.

Mothers should always keep Syrup of Figs handy. It is the only stomach, liver and bowel cleanser and regulator needed. A little given today will save a sick child tomorrow.

Full directions for children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the package.

Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna" prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. This is the delicious, tasteful, genuine old reliable. Refuse anything else offered.

ANOTHER BLACKHAND MYSTERY IN FREEPORT

WIDOW RECEIVES DEMAND FOR $500—IS THREATENED WITH "SOMETHING AWFUL."

Freeport has another black hand mystery which is puzzling the authorities and causing Mrs. Ben Grell, a widow, great worry. She received the following letter one day last week which she promptly turned over to the sheriff:

"Put $500 in the mail box next Saturday night or we will blow up your house and something awful will happen to your girl and some more of your folks."

The letter was decorated with a black hand and skull and crossbones. Sheriff Stewart and deputy remained in hiding near the rural mail box all Saturday night in an attempt to apprehend the blackmailer, but failed. Suspicion falls on a person living not far from the Grell home.

Kindness to Animals.

ABUSE OF THE AUTO

Punishment Sure to Follow Mania for Speed.

Tax on Eyes and Nervous System Is Too Great—Even Passengers Are Not Immune to Most Serious Affections.

The twentieth century may fairly be called the age of speed. The trolley car, rushing through city streets and country roads, replaces the jogging horse car and rumbling stage; the fast steamers take you to England in five days; the 1,000 between New York and Chicago is covered in 21 hours; and mankind has almost forgotten the joys of a quiet saunter. Distances have been shortened by the bicycle, the automobile and the power boat, and the aeroplane is to outspeed them all.

Although much is gained, perhaps, the physician knows that something is lost. The uses and benefits of the automobile, for example, are great if it is sensibly used, but when it is abused the danger to those in and out of the car is even greater. Driving a high-power car at full speed is a pleasurable form of intoxication, but like all intoxication it has its penalties, and they are heavy.

The driver's eyes and nervous system may suffer seriously, although there are numerous minor ills to which he is liable that may come first and teach him moderation.

The tax on the eyes is enormous, for they are kept at constant strain, looking for obstacles and inequalities in the road. The wind and dust in spite of goggles often cause a troublesome inflammation that yields only to rest in a darkened room and appropriate medical treatment.

A not uncommon affection of the eyes is a failure to focus properly, the ciliary muscles become exhausted and suddenly cease to act—a temporary paralysis that causes a sudden blurring of the vision. If that comes while the car is going at full speed the driver is fortunate if he can stop it in time. The only course for the driver who has had this affection is to give up the wheel, for if it has occurred once it may occur again at any time.

Another ailment that may affect the passengers as well as the driver is a painful, stiff neck caused by unconscious muscular tension. But the most serious penalty that follows abuse of the automobile is nervousness or nervous breakdown. A man whose brain is fatigued with business cares cannot with safety substitute another form of mental strain for the needed relaxation.—Youth's Companion.

Articles Not Mailable.

The following articles are unmailable under any circumstances: Liquids, ardent, vinous, spirituous or malt, cocaine or its derivatives, or those liable to explosion or spontaneous combustion; inflammable oils, poisons, explosives; animals, alive or dead (stuffed natural specimens excepted); explosive or poisonous powders, matches, insects (except queen bees and their attendant bees and dried insects when safely secured); substances exhalant an offensive odor; all articles not properly packed which are liable to destroy, deface or damage other mail matter or to harm the person of any one in the postal service; obscene and indecent books, prints, writings or papers; all letters upon envelopes of which, or postal cards upon which, indecent, scurrilous or defamatory delineations or language are written or printed; all matter concerning lotteries, so-called gift concerts, or other similar enterprises offering prizes, or concerning schemes devised or intended to defraud the public, or for the purpose of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Saving Your Sister-in-Law.

Since one of their ancient sages could decide a nice ethical point with notable good sense—perhaps even with lurking humor—there is promise that the people of China today, in the conflict between barbaric tradition and the growing sense of a woman's right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, may have the grace to make wise decisions. The following comes from "The Changing Chinese" of Prof. E. A. Ross:

A woman never thinks of shaking hands with a man. If a gentleman wishes to give a lady a fan he does not hand it to her, lest her hands touch, but places it beside her.

This sort of thing has been made so much of that about the time of Aristotle a local prude asked Mencius: "If a man's sister-in-law is drowning, ought he to draw her out with the hand?"

To which the sage sensibly replied: "It is foolish not to draw out a drowning sister-in-law."—Youth's Companion.

Our Children.

All Europe regards our children critically as the worst-trained children on earth. They are, or, to put it better, the least-trained. They have more freedom of action, room to experiment in, practice in responsibility. They do not make the worse citizens for this; their intelligence is keen, and they are as amenable to law and order when grown as in other countries, only if the law and order do not suit them they are more ready to institute new laws and a different order.—The Forerunner.

MOST INTIMATE ROOM

SOME INTERESTING FEATURES OF PRESIDENTIAL DEN.

Apartment Which Has Been Added to Private Suite on the Second Floor of White House May Be Called Most Characteristic.

During the past decade a new factor has appeared and gradually grown to importance in the domestic life of the presidential household through the provision at the White House of what is, to all intents and purposes, a new room. This apartment, which has been added to the private suite on the second floor of the historic mansion, is the president's study or "den," a room which may perhaps be called the most characteristic in the executive mansion—the nook most intimately identified with the activities of the chief magistrate in his various capacities.

At the White House, not only the state parlors, but most of the chambers as well, merely reflect the taste of the professional decorator and are furnished with articles chiefly interesting because of their historical associations. But in the president's "den," as it is fittingly called, the contents of the room and their arrangement are expressive of the personality and individuality of the distinguished occupant. The room serves the dual purpose of a retreat and a workshop—a haven where the president may seek the solitude that is a rare boon to one in his position and a study where, when occasion demands, there is opportunity for concentration and uninterrupted work.

And, as vehicles of research or relaxation, there are thousands of books in the low shelves that line the walls, although this study is not to be confused with the White House library, the adjoining room.

The presidential "den" is located directly over the green parlor and is of the same dimensions. From the time of President Johnson until the year 1902, this room was used as the cabinet room and in the then council chamber of the president's official family was signed the treaty of peace with Spain—an event that is commemorated by Chartran's splendid painting which now hangs in the most prominent place in the room. When the White House was remodeled during the administration of President Roosevelt, it was at first proposed that this room, like the others that had been used for executive office purposes, should be converted into a bedroom or guest chamber, but in the end it was decided to utilize it as a study or "den," in which function it has been used by Presidents Roosevelt and Taft with ever increasing appreciation of its advantages.

Beneath a window, that commands an inspiring view of the White House grounds, the Washington monument and the Potomac beyond, stands the desk where the president performs much of his most important work. This desk was presented to the nation by the late Queen Victoria and was made from the timbers of her majesty's ship Resolute, which, after having been abandoned in the Arctic in the search of Sir John Franklin, in the year 1852, was discovered and extricated by the captain of an American whaler and was later sent to England as a gift to the queen by the president and people of the United States. The desk set, a gift from Alaska, is a delicate novelty, a walrus tooth serving as the base for figures in solid gold.

Although nothing could be farther from intention than that the president's own room should savor of a museum, there are several articles in the "den" that, in addition to the desk, have historic significance. The old cabinet table has been retained and now serves to accommodate the overflow of books and current magazines. Over the white marble mantel, which was installed when this room was remodeled, hangs a full length painting of George Washington by a Spanish artist, which was sent as a gift to the nation from Ecuador, and in a glass case directly above the president's desk is the exquisite jeweled silk rug which was presented to the White House a few years since by the Persian government. The wall space at one end of the room is given over to the special presidential flag, which is unfurled upon certain ceremonial occasions, if the president be present.

Has Sense of Humor.

President-elect Woodrow Wilson has a sense of humor; at least, it is said that he is devoted to limericks, and that is supposed to indicate a high sense of humor. He cannot be called a howling beauty, and this must be so, for he recognized it himself, and here is a limerick which he wrote himself: "As a beauty I am not a star; There are others more handsome by far. "But my face, I don't mind it, For I am behind it— The people in front get the jar."

Gets Big Legacy.

It has been announced that the American university of this city is to receive from the late Rev. Dr. David H. Carroll, of Baltimore, Md., a legacy of $ 0,000.

DEMENTTOWN ...DOINGS

George, Eichenberg, the careful janitor at the court house, opines that it is all right to swap hats if everybody gets a fair exchange, but when an involuntary trade is made, and at church in the bargain, in which one fellow gets a mighty poor sky-piece, and you happen to be the one who gets the poor article, it is time to protest. That's what happened to George at the Lutheran church Sunday, and he's waiting patiently at the court house for the other fellow to bring back his lid. It's the general opinion that if George waits long enough and patiently enough he may get his hat—almost.

It's getting so that lace curtains at the front windows and iron dogs out in the back yard are not so much of a sign of aristocracy as they used to be.

We've had a whole week of Wilson's administration. And nothing dreadful has happened yet.

Natural (?) Question

This story is told of a Dixon bride of a few months, and vouched for by her husband. After the happy couple had returned from their honeymoon and started housekeeping, the lady of the house hired a girl to assist her. Everything went nicely until the third or fourth day when the happy wife asked a few friends in for dinner. She instructed the girl what she wished prepared for the meal and about an hour before the guests were to arrive she went to the kitchen to see how things were progressing.

She found the girl struggling with the coffee machine, and asked what she might do to relieve the situation. "Well, mum," confessed the girl, "I forgot to wash the lettuce. You might do that."

"Very well, Della," said Mrs. Newlywed, pleasantly. "Don't get excited. Take things coolly and I'll help you. You go right on with the coffee and I'll wash the lettuce. Where do you keep the soap?"

Hint on Feeding Baby.

Never allow a child to eat corned beef and cabbage before he is three months old, although he may be very fond of it.

Don't allow the three-months-old child to eat spaghetti or macaroni and cheese with the left hand. Teach him to use a fork.

Five-months-old children should not be allowed to eat salmon turbot or garlic too soon before retiring at night. Common sense should guide the parents in these things.

No child should be given rock candy, or roundhouse steak before it has teeth.

Those having parts in the home talent drama soon to be staged in the local opera house, are busy rehearsing their various speeches and are going to show the people of this vicinity a real treat. Prof. J. L. Dolan of the high school is instructing the performers.

The annual Easter ball this year is very apt to be a little bit late, but nevertheless, it will be held. The reason for the slight delay will be on account of the electric lights and no advertising matter will be distributed until the lights are a certainty. The opera house is wired and awaits the electric current. Just be patient and the Easter ball will be announced in due time.

Joseph Kuehna was here from Sublette on business Saturday.

Edwin Johnson returned home Friday night from Pasadena, Cal., where he has been spending the winter. He returned home by way of El Paso, Texas and New Orleans, La., and reports a fine time. We have not had the time to converse with Ed, so far, but will do so before long and hope to publish a report of his winter's vacation and the places he visited. We feel certain it will prove an interesting reading for our readers.

Go to the Telegraph, Dixon, Ill., for job printing.

F. W. Meyer and wife were in Chicago for a couple of days this week, buying goods for the summer for the store. They cut their visit short this time on account of the illness of the former's mother. At present writing she remains about the same and the best her many friends can do is to wish for her a rapid recovery.

We are glad to have our readers furnish us with news items and appreciate their efforts very much. However, we must ask that each person sending an item or list of items, should attach their name if the news is not sent in person, so that the writer can know from where the article originates. We have received several letters without name or author attached and we could not print them on that account. Some were meant as jokes on friends, no doubt, but still the absence of a name so essential in newspaperdom causes the consigning of these bits of news to the waste paper basket. Also do not ask to publish some item or items which would be out of place in these columns or would offend some of our readers. All our readers are good ones and we want to retain them all, and not have them offended in any way. Before submitting a joke for publication always weigh it carefully and consider the consequences from every angle. This will apply to all sorts of news items. Please do not forget to attach your name when you send in your next collection of news, and we will appreciate your kindness and the favor very much.

Miss Thersa Jeanguenat came home from Waterman Friday night to visit over Sunday with her folks.

Miss Frances Craigmiles of South Compton also returned home on the same train for a Sunday visit.

Julius Delhotal was here on business Saturday. He has sold a fine team of horses to Adolph Chaon so the next time you see Adolph smile you will know the reason why. "He has a brand new team to drive." We wish him luck with them.

The Illinois Northern Utilities Co., has a gang of men at work in West Brooklyn now and it seems the dream of electric lights are at last coming into reality. The prediction is that within a couple of weeks the streets and homes will all be lighted with electric lights and our people will all be happy. The gang is setting up the poles along the streets and alleys and from the way they are doing things we can easily see that they are here to stay until we have electricity lighting West Brooklyn. If you should happen in the Hotel Tressler and be surprised by the surplus of humanity in the lobby, you will know that it is due to the extra people in town in the employ of the Northern Utilities Co., who are stopping at that popular hostelry.

Following is a bit of poetry furnished us by a democrat written by him March 1, 1913. When questioned more fully he admitted he clipped it from a Taswell county paper. At any rate he requests publication saying it is seldom a democrat has the opportunity to print such literature. The article:

Mrs. Mulvaency of Ladd returned to her home on Saturday after visiting at the bed side of her mother in our city for a few days this week.

Albert Jeanblanc and wife of Lee Center township were visiting their many friends in town on Saturday afternoon.

Henry Untz boarded the morning passenger on Saturday morning for Mendota to visit during the day with friends and acquaintances.

Miss Eva Longhine of South Brooklyn visited on Saturday afternoon in this city with her many friends.

Don't you know that every man and woman should carry an old line life insurance policy in some good reliable company. There is no exception whatever to this rule, as it is simply a sound business proposition. A company like the Illinois Life Insurance Company is a good strong and reliable company to insure in and a company who offer a big line of liberal policies to choose from. Lou will make no mistake by insuring with the Illinois Life with H. F. & Oliver L. Gehant, agents at West Brooklyn, Ill.

Fred Burkardt was in town transacting business on Saturday afternoon.

Henry Hildmann went to Mendota on Saturday in the place of William Wigum, our tax collector. William was laid up with another attack of rheumatism and this accounts for the deputizing of Mr. Hildmann to work in his stead. We trust this last rheumatic attack will be only a big bluff and will not bother Mr. Wigum like his previous attack a couple weeks ago.

Mrs. Marguerite Montavon and grandson Edward Montavon were over from Compton on business Saturday.

William Meyer of Chicago returned to his home in the city on Saturday morning after a visit with his mother in our city.

It does not cost anything to attend McMahon's opening Friday and Saturday so every one should attend and learn all the new features in farm machinery.

Mr. and Mrs. Anton Fynboe of Denmark, are the happy parents of a son born Feb. 1913. Mrs. Fynboe was formerly Miss Agnes Nordby of Lee.

The Ole Winterton farm located 5 miles southwest of Lee and containing 80 acres was sold at auction Tuesday by order of the court to W. W. Winterton for $128.50.

A fair sized audience witnessed the entertainment given three nights last week by the W. J. Poluhim and Swiss Bell ringers of Janesville, Wis.

E. R. Coffield has sold his north 80 acre farm to O. Johnson for a consideration of $200 an acre. This piece of land lies 2 1-2 miles northeast of Lee, and joins Mr. Johnson's farm, which makes it more valuable to him than any one else. S. A. Wright of Pawpaw, made the sale Tuesday.

Mrs. Held of Aurora was the guest of her sister, Mrs. F. H. Nowe, the week, returning to her home Wednesday.

J. E. Melnberg and John Olson have gone into partnership in the blacksmith business.

M. H. Bly and H. H. Rissetter were in Chicago last week to attend the annual meeting of the directors of the Franklin Coal company.

PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN REGULATES STOMACH

TIME IT! IN FIVE MINUTES THE GAS, SOURNESS, HEARTBURN, AND INDIGESTION MISERY IS GONE.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, let tails down. Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so that you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. Diapepsin is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition, so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

BRITONS CONSIDER OLNEY

Will Be Named Ambassador If England Is Agreeable.

Washington, March 11.—It was learned definitely here that the only delay in sending the name of Richard Olney to the senate as the president's nominee for the ambassadorship to the court of St. James is caused by a lack of reply from that distinguished court. Inquiries have been instituted as to whether Mr. Olney will be acceptable. If a favorable report is received Mr. Olney's name will go in, and there is little doubt of his confirmation.

KING TARGET FOR MILITANT WOMEN

Suffragists Attempt to Reach Royal Couple and Seven Are Arrested.

BURN TWO RAILWAY STATIONS

Parliament Takes Extra Precautions to Avoid Interference by the Amazons or Their Male Supporters —"Searching of Vaults" Real.

London, March 11.—King George and Queen Mary were the targets for a suffragette attack here. Vague threats had been current for several days in connection with the suffragettes' plans for the ceremony of the opening of parliament. All their attempts at interference were brought to nought, however, by the extraordinary police precautions.

While the king and queen were on their way to Westminster five women attempted to approach his majesty in historic Whitehall. They carried petitions setting forth the grievances of women. The police promptly arrested the five and imprisoned them, although it seemed for a time as if the crowd would overwhelm the police and administer punishment in summary fashion.

Two other suffragettes were arrested in the vicinity of Marlborough house and escaped rough handling only through the energetic efforts of the police. Shouts of "Duck them!" "Into the lake with them!" brought out a mob of 3,000, all bent on taking the women from the hands of the police.

There was a notable demonstration of hostility against the suffragettes by the vast throng gathered to see the royal procession. The five women required the protection of a hundred policemen to keep back the mob, which was exasperated by the recent outrages of the militants.

Another station, Croxley Green, about three miles from London, on the London & Northwestern, also was burned, but the cause of the fire has not been ascertained. Both Saunders and Croxley Green were new stations.

Parliament Takes Precautions. In connection with the opening of the new session of the British parliament by King George, elaborate precautions were taken to prevent interference by militant suffragettes or their male supporters. The time-honored ceremony known as "searching of the vaults" underneath the house of commons and the house of lords, which has been carried out since the attempt by Guy Fawkes in 1605 to blow up the king and parliament, but which in later years has been performed in perfunctory manner, was undertaken seriously.

King Opens Parliament. King George opened the third session of the present parliament after a prorogation of only two days, the briefest recess on record.

The state ceremony was performed in the house of peers. The king and queen took their places on the throne in the presence of a great gathering.

The king's speech from the throne was devoted chiefly to the Balkan war, expressing the earnest desire of the European powers to hasten the conclusion of peace.

$5,000 SUIT AGAINST BANK

Detroit Publisher Seeks Redress From Garfield National of N. Y.

New York, March 11.—Claiming that his credit has been impaired by the action of the Garfield National bank in dishonoring checks drawn from his branch office in this city, Elmer H. Beach, a publisher of Detroit, Mich., filed a suit for $5,000 against that institution in the supreme court. The checks which the Garfield National refused to honor were drawn in favor of Michigan firms by Beach's branch office here.

SPAIN CHOOSES DEPUTIES

Many Persons Killed in Election Riots During the Day.

Madrid, March 11.—Election riots throughout Spain resulted in several persons being killed and a score more or less badly hurt. The returns indicate that 75 Liberals were returned, 55 Conservatives, 8 Republicans and 23 Catholics.

Senate Confirms Marble.

Washington, March 11.—In executive session the senate confirmed the nomination of John H. Marble of California as interstate commerce commissioner, and in open session Joe T. Robinson was sworn in as a senator from Arkansas, to succeed the late Jeff Davis.

What He Didn't Understand. "Yes," says the cousin from the east, who is being shown over the irrigated ranch, "but there is one thing that puzzles me. How do you get the water away up here?" "We bring it down from the mountain in those flumes," explains the western cousin. "I see all that plainly enough, but how in the dickens do you pump it up to the top of the mountain?"

Horses and Music. The Swiss horse is apparently a very musical animal—or not, according to the hearer's ear. Strings of bells are hung round their necks, producing a musical jangle at every step. Some of the horses with the most bells, I noticed, were the thinnest—apparently they went without food to buy bells. A horse like that ought to be restrained.

Happiness. Those who have the most of happiness think the least about it. But in thinking about and in doing their duty happiness comes—because the heart and mind are occupied with earnest thought that touches at a thousand points the beautiful and sublime realities of the universe.—Thackeray.

Distinguishing Names. "In a certain Swiss valley," writes a traveler, "family after family there bears the same name—Treusch—all relationship being lost in antiquity. So, to distinguish the guides, they must be known—you may see it in Baedeker—as Joseph Treusch the Red and Joseph Treusch the Black.

Wise Man. Once upon a time a wise man penned a letter full of confidential statements, and at the end he wrote a line, heavily underscored: "Burn this letter." Then, being a wise man, he took his own advice and burned the letter himself.

So They Danced After All. At the conference of orthodox rabbis held in London last March a resolution was adopted discouraging dancing on the ground that "the practice of dancing—men with women—is contrary to good morals."—New York Tribune.

Task for Geographers. Algiers is said to have the largest European population of any city in Africa. Johannesburg comes next, then Oran. Will the class in geography kindly locate the latter town, with its 100,000 Europeans, without referring to the atlas?

Another Sure Cure. Pierre Loti says there is "too much talk at dinner." Way to prevent it would be to enlist the services of the hotel men and have it put on the extra list, along with bread and butter.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Brilliant Afterthoughts. A bon mot is something that you might have said, but which does not occur to you until the next day.—Boston Globe.

By Trying. It's by trying that you make your character. A man's character is the sum of his intentions and his choices.—E. F. Benson.

One of Life's Mysteries. Appreciating somewhat the sense of humor, we are still unable to figure out why girls giggle.—Atchison Globe.

TURK MASSACRE ASKED

Slaughter of Population of Scutari Is Threatened.

Belgrade Paper Urges That Town Should Be Razed and No Quarter Given Civilians.

London, March 11.—The massacre of the entire population of the Turkish fortress of Scutari is probable when that city falls, according to a traveler who writes to the Manchester Guardian. The newspaper says the writer has every opportunity to know the temper of the Montenegrin and Serbian besiegers. It appeals to Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign secretary, and to the European powers to take steps to avert such a massacre.

The writer says that Serbian officers at the port of Durazzo boasted to him that they had exterminated the Moslem Albanian tribe of Lyuma.

"We have completely exterminated the Rugova tribes," a Montenegrin told him. "When we had overpowered them we made them all pass under the sword."

The leading "Belgrade" paper is quoted as recommending that no quarter be given to the civilian inhabitants of Scutari and that the town be leveled to the ground. The Balkan situation came up for discussion in the house of commons.

JURY EXONERATES YOUTH

Boy Who Shot Father to Protect Sister Is Freed at Inquest.

Chicago, March 11.—Eight hours after he had shot and killed his father, Peter Schreiber, nineteen years old, was exonerated by a coroner's jury here and set free. The tragedy occurred at breakfast time in the home of the Schreibers, 5806 South Fairfield avenue. The father, suddenly enraged at something, seized a butcher knife and rushed toward his daughter Helma, young Schreiber testified. While the other members of the family stood aghast, powerless to render any help, he and his sister sought shelter in the pantry. The father, he declared, tried to force the door, when the young man shot the elder Schreiber through the neck with a rifle.

CHAPTER XV.

Love and Duty at the Touch.
Thorne's case was now absolutely hopeless. By the testimony of two witnesses a thing is established. All that Arrelsford had seen Edith had seen. All that he knew, she knew. She had only to speak and the plan had failed; the cleverly constructed scheme would fall to pieces. His brother's life would have been wasted, nay more, his own life also; for well did he realize that the bold way he had played the game would the more certainly hasten his immediate execution. A spy in the Confederate capital!

He could reproach himself with nothing. He had done his very best. An ordinary man would have failed a dozen times in the struggle. Courage, adroitness, resourcefulness, and good fortune had carried him so far, but the odds were now heavily against him and nothing that he could do would avail him anything. The game was played and he had lost; Arrelsford had triumphed.

Thorne, in the one word that Edith Varney was to speak, would lose life, honor and that for which he had risked both. And he would lose more than that. He would lose the love of the woman who had never seemed so beautiful to him as she stood there, pale-faced, erect, the very incarnation of self-sacrifice, as were all the women of the Confederacy. And he would lose more than her love. He would lose her respect. His humiliation would be her humiliation. Never so long as she lived could her mind dwell on him with tenderness.

His condition was indeed pitiable; yet, to do him justice, his thoughts were not so much for himself as they were for two other things. First and foremost he bled before him the plan for which he had made all this sacrifice, which had promised to end the weary months of siege which Richmond and Petersburg had sustained. His brother had lost his life, he more than suspected, in the endeavor to carry it out, and now he had failed. That was a natural humiliation and reproach to his pride, although as his mind went back over the scene he could detect no false move on his part. Of course his allowing his love for Edith Varney to get the mastery of him had been wrong under the circumstances, but that had not affected the failure or success of his endeavors.

And his thoughts also were for the woman. He knew that she loved him, she had admitted it, but once his eyes had been opened, he could have told it without any admission at all. All that he had suffered, she had suffered, and more. If she would be compelled to apologize for him, she would also be compelled to assume the defensive for him. She loved him and she was placed in the fearful position of having to deal the blow. The words which would presently fall from her lips would complete his undoing. They would blast his reputation forever and send him to his death. He knew they would not be easy words for her to speak. He knew that whatever his merit or demerit, she would never forget that it was she who had completed his ruin; the fact that she would also ruin the plan against her country would not weigh very heavily in her breaking heart against that present personal consideration—after a while maybe but not at first. And therefore he pitied her.

He drew himself erect to meet his fate like a man and waited. The wait was a long one. Edith Varney was having her own troubles. She knew as well as anyone the importance of her testimony. She had come from the commissary general's vacant office and had been back at the window long enough to have heard the conversation between General Randolph and the two men. She was an unusually keen-witted girl and she realized the situation to the full.

Her confidence in her lover had been shaken, undermined, restored, and shaken again, until her mind was in a perfect whirl. She did not know, she could not tell whether he was what he seemed to be or not. It seemed like treachery to him, this uncertainty. It would be a simple matter to corroborate Mr. Arrelsford at once, and it occurred to her that she had no option. But coincident with the question flashed into her mind something she had forgotten which made it possible for her to answer in another way. Thus, she understood that the life of her lover hung upon her decision.

Her eyes flashed quickly from the vindictive yet triumphant face of Arrelsford, whom she loathed, to the pale, composed, set face of Thorne, whom she loved, and her glance fell upon his wounded left wrist, tied up, the blood oozing through the handkerchief. A wave of sympathy and tenderness filled her breast. He was hurt, suffering—that decided her.

With one brief, voiceless prayer to God for guidance, she turned to General Randolph, and it was well that she spoke when she did, for the pause had become insupportable to Thorne at least. He had made up his mind to relieve the dilemma and confess his guilt so that the girl would not have to reproach herself with a betrayal of her lover or her cause, that she might not feel that she had been found wanting at the critical moment. Indeed, Thorne would have done this before but his duty as a soldier enjoined upon him the propriety, the imperative necessity, of playing the game to the very end. The battle was not yet over. It would never be over until he faced the firing party.

And then Edith's voice broke the silence that had become so tense with emotion.

"Mr. Arrelsford is mistaken, General Randolph," she said quietly, "Captain Thorne has the highest authority in this office."

Arrelsford started violently and opened his mouth to speak, but General Randolph silenced him with a look. The blood of the old general was up, and it had become impossible for anyone to presume in the least degree. Thorne started, too. The blood rushed to his heart. He thought he would choke to death. What did the girl mean?

"The highest authority, sir," continued Edith Varney, slowly drawing out the commission, which every one but she had forgotten in the excitement, "the authority of the president of the Confederate States of America."

Well, she had done it for weal or for woe. She had made her decision. Had it been a wise decision? What interest had governed her, love for Thorne, love for her country, or love for her own peace of mind? It was in the hands of General Randolph now. The girl turned slowly away unable to sustain the burning glances of her lover and the vindictive stare of Arrelsford.

"What's this?" said General Randolph. "Umph! A major's commission. In command of the telegraph department. Major Thorne, I congratulate you."

"That commission, General Randolph!" exclaimed Arrelsford, his voice rising, "let me explain how she—"

"That will do from you, sir," said the general, "you have made enough trouble as it is. I suppose you claim that this is a forgery, too?"

"Let me tell you, sir," persisted the secret service agent.

"You have told me enough as it is. Sergeant, take him over to headquarters."

"Fall in there!" cried the sergeant of the guard. "Two of you take the prisoner. Forward march!"

Two men seized Arrelsford, and the rest of them closed about him. To do the man justice, he made a violent struggle and was only marched out at the point of the bayonet, protesting and crying:

"For God's sake, he's in the Yankee secret service! He'll send that dispatch out! His brother brought in the signal tonight!"

All the way down the corridor he could be heard yelling and struggling. General Randolph paid not the slightest attention to him. He stepped over to the telegraph table beside which Thorne stood—and with all the force of which he was capable the young man could hardly control the trembling of his knees.

"Major Thorne," he said reprovingly as Thorne saluted him, "all this delay has been your own fault. If you had only had sense enough to mention this before we would have been saved a damned lot of trouble. There's your commission, sir." He handed it to Thorne, who saluted him again as one in a dream. "Come, gentlemen," he said to his officers, "I can't understand why they have to be so cursed shy about their secret service orders! Lieutenant Foray?"

"Yes, sir."

"Take your orders from Major Thorne."

"Yes, sir," returned Foray.

"Good night, sir," answered Thorne. Foray moved over to the table at the right, while Thorne leaped to his former position, and his hand sought the key. At last he could send his message, there was nothing to prevent him or interrupt him now, he was in command. Could he get it through? For a moment he forgot everything but that, as he clicked on the call again, but he had scarcely pressed the button when Edith Varney stepped to his side.

"Captain Thorne," she said in a low voice, giving him the old title. He looked up at her, stopping a moment.

"What I have done gives you time to escape from Richmond," she continued.

"Escape!" whispered Thorne, clicking the key again. "Impossible!"

"Oh," said the girl, laying her hand on his arm, "you wouldn't do it—now!"

And again the man's fingers remained poised over the key as he stared at her.

"I gave it to you to—save your life. I didn't think you'd use it for anything else. Oh! You wouldn't!" Her voice in its low whisper was agonizing. If her face had been white before, what could be said of it now? In a flash Thorne saw all. She had been confident of his guilt, and she had sought to save his life because she loved him, and now because she loved her country she sought to save that too.

The call sounded from the table. Thorne turned to it, bent over it, and listened. It was the call for the message. Then he turned to the woman. She looked at him; just one look. The kind of a look that Christ might have turned upon Peter after those denials when he saw him in the courtyard early on that bitter morning of betrayal. "I saved you," the girl's look seemed to say, "I redeemed you and now you betray me!" She spoke no words, words were useless between them. Everything had been said, everything had been done. She could only go. Never woman looked at man nor man looked at woman as these two at each other.

The woman turned, she could trust herself no further. She went blindly toward the door. The man followed her slowly, crushing the commission in his hand, and ever as he went he heard the sound of the call behind him. He stopped halfway between the door and the table and watched her go, and then he turned.

Lieutenant Foray understanding nothing of what had transpired, but hearing the call, had taken Thorne's place before the table. He had the dispatch about which there had been so much trouble, and upon which the whole plan turned, in his hand before him.

"They are calling for that dispatch, sir," he said as Thorne stared at him in agony. "What shall I do with it?"

"Send it," said the other hoarsely. "Very good, sir," answered Foray, seating himself and taking hold of the key, but the first click of the sounder awakened Thorne to action.

"No, no!" he cried. "Stop!" He rushed forward and seized the dispatch. "I won't do it!" he thundered. "With his wounded hand and his well one he tore the dispatch into fragments. "Revoke the order. Tell them it was a mistake instantly. I refuse to act under this commission!"

CHAPTER XVI.

The Tumult in Human Hearts.
Of the frightful nights in Richmond during the siege, that night was one of the worst. The comparative calmness of the earlier hours of repose of the quiet April evening gave way to pandemonium. The works at Petersburg, desperately held by the Confederates, were miles away from the city to the southward, but such was the tremendous nature of the cannonading that the shocking sounds seemed to be close at hand. Children cowered, women shuddered, and old men prayed as they thought of the furious onslaughts in the battle raging.

The Richmond streets were filled with people, mostly invalids, non-combatants, women and children. A tremendous attack was being launched by the besiegers somewhere, it was evident. Urgent messengers from General Lee called every reserve out of the garrison at Richmond, and the quiet streets and country highways awoke instantly to life. Such troops as could be spared moved to the front at the double-quick. Every car of the dilapidated railroad was pressed into service. Those who could not be transported by train went on horseback or afoot. The youngest boy and the oldest man alike shouldered their muskets, and with motley clothes, but with hearts aflame, marched to the sound of the cannon. The women, the sick, the wounded and invalid men and the children waited.

Morning would tell the tale. Into the city from which they marched, men and boys would come back; an army nearly as great as had gone forth, but an army halting, maimed, helpless, wounded, suffering, shot to pieces. They had seen it too often not to be able to forecast the scene absolutely. They knew with what heroic determination their veterans, under the great Lee, were fighting back the terrific attacks of their brothers in blue, under the grimly determined Grant. They could hear his great war-hammer ringing on their anvil; a hammer of men, an anvil of men. Plan or no plan, success or no success of some secret service operations, some vital point was being wrestled for in a death-grapple between two armies; and all the offensive capacities of the one and all the defensive resources of the other were meeting, as they had been meeting during the long years.

In a time like that, of public peril and public need, private and personal affairs ought to be forgotten, but it was not so. Love and hate, confidence and jealousy, faithfulness and disloyalty, self-sacrifice and revenge, were still in human hearts. And these feelings would put to shame even the passions engendered in the bloody battles of the fearful warfare.

Edith Varney, for instance, had gone out of the telegraph office assured that the sacrifice she had made for her lover had resulted in the betrayal of her country; that Thorne had had not even the common gratitude to accede to her request, although she had saved his life, and, for the time being, his honor. Every cannon-shot, every crashing volley of musketry that came faintly or loudly across the hills seemed pointed straight at her heart. For all she knew, the dispatch had been sent, the cunningly devised scheme had been carried out, and into some undetected gap in the lines the federal troops were pouring. The defense would crumble and the army would be cut in two; the city of Richmond would be taken, and the Confederacy would be lost.

And she had done it! Would she have done it if she had known? She had certainly expected to establish such a claim upon Thorne by her interposition that he could not disregard it. But if she had known positively that he would have done what she thought he did, would she have sent him to his death? She put the question to herself in agony. And she realized with flushes of shame and waves of contrition that she would not, could not have done this thing. She must have acted as she had, whatever was to come of it. Whatever he was, whatever he did, she loved that man. She need not tell him, she need tell no one, there could be no fruition to that love. She must hide it, bury it in her bosom if she could, but for weal or woe she loved him above everything else, and for all eternity.

Where was he now? Her interposition had been but for a few moments. The truth was certain to be discovered. There would be no ultimate escape possible for him. She heard shots on occasion nearer than Petersburg, in the city streets. What could they mean? Short, short would be his shift if they caught him. Had they caught him? Certainly they must, if they had not. She realized with a thrill that she had given him an opportunity to escape and that he had refused it. The sending of that dispatch had been more to him than life. Traitor, spy, secret service agent—was there anything that could be said for him? At least he was faithful to his own idea of duty.

She had met Caroline Milford waiting in the lower hall of the telegraph office, and the two, conveyed by old Martha, had come home together. Many curious glances had been thrown at them, but in these great movements that were toward, no one molested them. The younger girl had seen the agony in her friend's face. She had timidly sought to question her, but she had received no answer or no satisfaction to her queries. Refusing Caroline's proffered services when she reached home, Edith had gone straight to her own room and locked the door.

The affair had been irritating beyond expression to Mr. Arrelsford. It had taken him some time to establish his innocence and to get his release from General Randolph's custody. Meanwhile, everything that he had hoped to prevent had happened. To do him justice, he really loved Edith Varney, and the thought that her actions and her words had caused his own undoing and the failure of his carefully laid plans, filled him with bitterness, which he vented in increased animosity toward Thorne.

These were bitter moments to Mrs. Varney. She had become somewhat used to her husband being in the thick of things, but it was her boy now that was in the ranks. The noise of the cannon and the passing troops threw Howard into a fever of anxiety which was very bad for him.

And those were dreadful moments to Thorne. What had he done? He had risked everything, was ready to pay everything, would, indeed, be forced to do so in the end, and yet he had not done that which he had intended. Had he been false to his duty and to his country when he refused to send that telegram, being given the opportunity? He could not tell. The ethics of the question were beyond his present solution. The opportunity had come to him through a piece of sublime self-sacrifice on the part of the woman, who, knowing him thoroughly and understanding his plan and purpose, had yet perjured herself to save his life.

That life was hers, was it not? He had become her prisoner as much as if she had placed him under lock and key and held him without the possibility of communication with anyone. Her honor was involved. No, under the circumstances, he could not send the dispatch. The Confederates would certainly kill him if they caught him, and if they did not, and by any providential chance he escaped, his honor would compel him to report the circumstances, the cause of his failure, to his own superiors. Would they court-martial him for not sending the dispatch? Would they enter into his feelings, would they understand? The popular idea of a secret service agent, a spy, was that he would stick at nothing. As such men were outside the pale of military brotherhood, so were they supposed to have a code of their own. Well, his code did not permit him to send the dispatch when his power to send it had been procured in such a way. It was not so much love for the woman as it was honor—her honor, suddenly put into his keeping—that turned him from the key. When both honor and love were thrown into the scale, there was no possibility of any other action. He could not see any call of duty paramount to them.

He stood looking at Foray for a while, and then, without a further command to that intensely surprised young man, or even a word of explanation, he seized his hat and coat and left the room. Foray was a keen-witted officer, he reviewed the situation briefly, and presently a great light dawned upon him. A certain admiration for Thorne developed in his breast, and as Allison opportunely came back at this juncture, he turned over the telegraph office to his subordinate, and in his turn went out on what he believed to be an exceedingly important errand.

Thorne found the streets full of people. He had not marked the beginning of the cannonading in the tumult of the office, but the lights, the bells pealing alarms from every church steeple, the tramping of horses and men, and the roll of the gun-carriages apprised him of what was toward. Trusting that Thorne had been able to carry out his part, Grant was attacking the place indicated by "Plan 3" in heavy force.

What was Thorne to do? Obviously attempt to escape from Richmond, although it would be a matter of extreme difficulty on account of the alarm which now aroused every section. He could not go, either, until he had seen his brother. He surmised that he was dead, but he could not know that; and he determined not to attempt to leave without making assurance double sure. It was a duty he owed to his brother, to his father in the Union army, and to his superiors in the federal secret service. If that brother were alive, he must be at the Varney house. He fancied that he would run as little chance of being observed in the excitement going in that direction as in any other, and he started to make his way there.

The fact that Edith was there influenced him also. Was the call of love and the living as great, or greater than the call of duty and the dying or the dead? Who shall say?

And the remote chance that he might be observed on the way was taken by his ever-vigilant enemy; for Arrelsford, upon obtaining his freedom, had sent the troops at the disposal of the secret service to hunt him down, and one of them caught sight of him. The shout of the observer apprised him of his discovery. He threw one glance behind him and then ran for his life. He had no especial hope of escaping, but he might get to the Varney house ahead of the soldiers, and he might see his brother, and he might see the woman he loved for a moment before he was taken and killed.

If it had not been for the two he would have stopped and given himself up. Somehow he did not care for life. His life was forfeit to the Federals and the Confederates alike. When she thought to save it, Edith Varney had doomed him. Also he felt that she had damned him. But he ran on and on, doubling and turning on his tracks; white-faced, desperate, his breath coming fainter, his heart beating faster, as he ran.

SOLONS END IN RIOT MANY NOMINATED BY THE PRESIDENT

Indiana Legislature Adjourns After "Rough House."

Delegation of House Members Create Wild Havoc in Senate Chamber—In Disorder Two Hours.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 11.—Confusion reigned at the close of the Indiana general assembly here when, in the usual "rough house" session, Barney A. Carter of Hammond led a delegation of house members to the senate and gutted the chamber of every paper, bill, book and other available material that human hands could be laid on.

After the melee senators found the documents relating to important legislation which had been pending for days, and was to have been taken up at the last session, were ruined.

In the midst of the mixup in the senate it was found that the Cravens tax levy bill, raising the levies for several funds, had been drawn so that it would have repealed all former tax levies made for the same purpose. Attempt after attempt was made to get order so that the bill might be brought back and amended.

It was nearly two hours before order was restored so business could proceed toward the end of the session and, at the close of the turmoil, the desks of the senators were covered with ink, the carpets were torn up, waste baskets were demolished and the senate chamber presented a scene of chaos.

The specific appropriation bill was the last thing acted on, and it was past midnight when the conferees agreed on a report and the chambers adjourned sine die, and the clocks had to be turned back to get within the "time limit."

STATE TROOPS VICTORS

Rebel Soldiers of Sonora Win Over the Federals.

Forces Raised by Governor to Oppose Huerta Rout Enemy in Fight at Nacoziari.

Douglas, Ariz., March 11.—After a battle lasting for three days, 800 Sonora state troops, or the forces that have defied the Huerta government, now hold Nacoziari.

A special train arrived at Agua Prieta bearing 175 defeated federals. Lieutenant Colonel Lopez, the federal commander, a passenger on the train, had been shot through the neck and was in a critical condition. Twenty soldiers were wounded and are being cared for at Agua Prieta.

The capture of Nacoziari opens the road, it is believed, to Agua Prieta, and if the latter town is taken the insurgent state troops can march westward along the border, encountering only small garrisons at Nogales, Naco and other small towns.

The American mining camp at El Tigre, forty miles southeast of Douglas, fell into the hands of 150 state troops. The 100 federals of the garrison, fleeing toward the border, were overtaken by the constitutionalists, who captured their arms, ammunition and artillery after a sharp skirmish.

New York, March 11.—Members of the Madero family now here visited personal friends and received others at their hotel. Whatever steps the Madero family may take while here, close friends said would be in the direction of retaining ownership of their vast real estate holdings in Mexico, which are estimated to be worth about $100,000,000.

MRS. WILSON'S FIRST TEA

Mrs. Marshall and Wives of Cabinet Officers Are the Guests.

Washington, March 11.—Mrs. Wilson gave her first tea in the White House, with Mrs. Marshall, the wife of the vice-president, and the wives of the cabinet members as her guests. The first lady in the land presided at the tea table and practically every woman in the cabinet circle dropped in during the afternoon. Tea was served in the president's study on the second floor of the White House, instead of in the red room, where Mrs. Taft and Mr. Roosevelt held similar functions.

CITY DESTROYED BY QUAKE

Capital of Santa Rosa, Guatemala, Laid in Ruins by Severe Shock.

Washington, March 11.—According to an official report from the American charge at Guatemala City, a severe earthquake destroyed Guajmalupala, capital of Santa Rosa province, but did not injure Guatemala City. Villages within a radius of 18 miles were damaged. No estimate of the loss of life is possible because of the lack of communication in Guatemala.

Establishes Bowling Record.

Toledo, O., March 11.—Flor de Kinspels are leading the A. B. C. tournament here. The St. Paul team set up a world's record of 3,006 pins, passing the Overlands of Toledo, who established a record of 2,992 a week ago.

Morton's Condition Unchanged.

New York, March 11.—A bulletin issued by the physicians attending former Vice-President Levi P. Morton states that the patient's condition remains unchanged and that he is still conscious.

Roper First Assistant Postmaster General and Dockery Third.

BREAKS RULE FOR FIRST TIME

Wilson Talks Patronage With Clark, Stone and Reed of Missouri—Receives Diplomatic Corps in White House Blue Room.

Washington, March 11.—The president sent to the senate the following nominations:

Daniel C. Roper of South Carolina to be first assistant postmaster general; Alexander M. Dockery of Missouri, third assistant postmaster general; James I. Blackslee of Pennsylvania, fourth assistant postmaster general; Peter J. Hamilton of Alabama, to be United States judge for the district of Porto Rico, and Dr. Charles P. Neill, District of Columbia, to be commissioner of labor statistics, a renomination. Assistant secretary of the navy, Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York.

President Wilson reversed his decision to talk patronage with no one and accepted from Speaker Clark and Senators Stone and Reed of Missouri the list of men they want appointed to office.

Breaks Rule for First Time.

This is the first time the president has broken his rule, laid down the day following his inauguration, to pass along to cabinet members all matters of patronage. The rule was first applied to Senators Bryan and Fletcher of Florida, who were sent to Attorney General McReynolds when they wanted to talk about Florida federal judges. It was also enforced against subsequent applicants for patronage audiences, both from the senate and from the house.

Receives Diplomatic Corps.

President Wilson stopped taking measure of office seekers here long enough to receive the diplomatic corps in the blue room of the White House. The reception was brief, the president merely receiving the greeting of the representatives of foreign nations.

The spectacle was the most brilliant one presented at the White House under the new administration as there was nearly as many varieties of gold lace in evidence as there are civilized nations.

During the forenoon the entire diplomatic corps called at the state department and were formally presented to Secretary Bryan.

Ambassador James Bryce of Great Britain and Baron Chinda, ambassador from Japan, were the only foreign representatives who had made previous calls at the White House since President Wilson has been running the affairs of the nation.

Change Military Policy.

That an entire change of the military policy of the government with regard to Mexico is to be inaugurated was revealed here when Secretary of War Garrison took steps looking toward the withdrawal of the United States troops now posted along the border.

Mr. Garrison announced that he had telegraphed to Gen. Tasker H. Bliss asking if it is possible to withdraw the troops a sufficient distance from the border so as to make impossible clashes between them and Mexican guerrillas or regulars.

The secretary justified this action by the assertion that the danger of United States troops becoming embroiled in trans-border disturbances is great so long as they are close to the border and that such imbroglios might easily lead to serious trouble. The secretary adds that he intends to keep enough troops near the Mexican border to enforce the neutrality laws. He is not yet ready for the complete removal of the "army of observation" as the two divisions now in Galveston or on the border are termed.

ATTACKED HELEN TAFT

Ex-President's Daughter Was Menaced in Suffrage Parade.

So Discloses Mrs. Kate Richards O'Hare, Grand Marshal of One of the Divisions.

St. Louis, March 11.—"Miss Helen Taft was attacked by a rowdy in the suffrage parade in Washington, and her sash was torn from her gown," declared Mrs. Kate Richards O'Hare, grand marshal of one of the pageant divisions, upon her return to St. Louis.

"As the then president's daughter walked by the rowdy reached out and seized her. Miss Taft received no protection whatever from the police," added Mrs. O'Hare.

"The boy scouts did more to protect them than did the police," continued the suffrage leader. "They were armed with wands, and they wielded them well, and kept innumerable men and boys at bay who would have plucked at the women's gowns."

Strike Is Settled.

Boston, March 11.—The difference between the cloak and skirt manufacturers and 3,000 striking employees was adjusted here. The workers returned to work today.

SCOTCH CITY WRECKED

Houses, Churches and Schools Fall in Irvine, Ayrshire.

Detonation of Dynamite at Marble Works Near Glasgow Causes Big Loss—Six Bodies Found.

Glasgow, Scotland, March 11.—A terrific dynamite explosion wrecked the town of Irvine in Ayrshire. The number of dead is not known. It is said that the injured number hundreds. The explosion occurred at Nobel's explosive works at Arden, twenty miles from Glasgow. Within a radius of several miles it had the force of a destructive earthquake. The town of Irvine was shaken to its foundations. Many houses, churches, schools and public institutions were destroyed.

Six bodies had been recovered up to a late hour, while seven persons fatally hurt and a number of others less seriously injured had been taken to hospitals.

Ceilings fell everywhere, partitions collapsed and scarcely a window in the town was left intact. People walking on the streets were thrown to the ground and many were seriously injured. All the inhabitants rushed from their houses in consternation. The water front and the harbor were masses of wreckage.

There were three distinct explosions, followed by an immense column of smoke two miles high.

WHITE WHIPS PAL MOORE

Chicago Lad Gives Opponent Artistic Lacing in 10-Round Go.

Kenosha, Wis., March 11.—Charlie White of Chicago gave Pal Moore an artistic lacing in a rough, savage ten-round fight which wound up a stellar boxing show here. The bout was of such a desperate character that the 1,000 glove enthusiasts who paid some $3.00 to see four good battles, stood up and howled their appreciation from the first round on. The bout was of such a desperate character and they were so evenly divided in favoritism that there was a continual uproar for the entire half hour.

Speaking of the Divorce Evil

Trying to succeed in business without advertising is like the case of the man who, trying to out expense, divorced his wife and alone attempted to keep house and raise his children. It cost him more money for doctor bills and funeral expenses in a year than he gave his wife in a lifetime.

When advertising is divorced, business success becomes failure.

This paper is building your neighbor's business. He has reasons. He tried advertising and it helped him. It is not an experiment—this paper brings results. Good, hard, convincing results—dollars.
